

INDIANA'S LEGISLATURE—2.

BY ONE WHO WAS THERE.

The assembly that gathers at Indianapolis every two years to enact laws for the state is composed mainly of small lawyers, well-to-do farmers, ambitious editors, popular tradesmen and a few physicians, insurance agents and union labor men. In the main they are shrewd, quiet and honest; but their shrewdness is limited to their usually narrow experience, their quiet habits are disturbed by the new opportunities of their unaccustomed life in the city, and their honesty is even to themselves an unknown quantity when tested by undreamed-of temptations.

They are usually narrow-minded and slow to receive new ideas, but when an idea is once firmly grasped they adhere to it tenaciously, often without understanding it. If they are not native Americans, as they almost invariably are, they are fully Americanized in their ways and habits of thought. There are always a few first-class men among them and the intelligence and integrity of these few command the profound respect of the others and elevate their possessors to positions of leadership that the designing ones find difficulty in breaking away from.

The larger cities generally furnish the corruptionists and the smaller towns the corruptibles, though this situation is quite apt to be reversed, at least in a measure. The members who are secretly employed to foster special interests and to aid and guide the lobbyists for those interests are almost always city men, and city men, also, are nearly always chosen to look after political matters. Indeed, they are sent to the legislature for such purposes and being bright, entertaining, open-hearted good fellows, perfectly at home in the city and able to call the leading men in the state by their first names, they naturally impress the lesser members and readily secure the influence their objects require. They oppose their trickery and blandishments to the impressive scholarship and rugged honesty of the educated and high-minded members, greatly to the disgust and often to the confusion of the latter. The ignorance of the bulk of the members is more depended upon than corruption in most cases of objectionable legislation.

Brittany undoubtedly occurs and it can for the most part be detected by those who have breathed the legislative atmosphere and know the signs. An assemblyman in Indiana gets $366 for the session, to which is added a small amount of mileage. His campaign expenses have been ordinarily between $200 and $400 and his expenses during the 61 days of the session will run seldom less than four dollars a day. Many a man has spent as much as $2,000 for his election, and an equal sum during the two months he occupies his seat. That rare bird, the member whose salary covers his campaign and session expenses, or even the latter alone, and leaves him a balance saved, is not regarded as much of a man and will make no friends.

Under such circumstances it is very easy with some men, those who can afford to give their money and their time too for a mere fleeting honor, to compound with their consciences and accept a little honorarium for a vote or a word where they cannot see that anyone will be hurt by it and where they fondly imagine that no one outside will ever know the circumstance. In lieu of money it may be an overcoat, or a hat, or the promise of an appointment, or an annual pass, or a night's spree—some men are exceedingly cheap—but when the man has accepted the price and delivered the goods he is marked with a V on every lobbyist's list and the rapidity of his descent is only measured by the frequency with which his vote may be needed. The letter V stands for venal and X, the sign of the cross, stands for exalted, unapproachable. The lobbyists exchange this information among themselves for their mutual benefit and also tell a few friends, just as a matter of idle curiosity.

The secret almost invariably escapes and gets back to the bribed one's home, and his subsequent conduct, such as dressing for a time a little better than usual, or living a little higher, or making an unaccustomed investment in real estate, confirms the rumor. An amateur thief will always give himself away by soon spending the money he steals. So, too, if he betrays great and apparently unnecessary touchiness in the matter of his legislative integrity and rushes to his own defense where no attack is made, he unintentionally gives the most convincing proof of his venality. Innocent men have no cause to anticipate that suspicion will fall upon them.

The most ridiculous and at the same time pitiful personage in a legislative body is the accidental member, the one whose nomination or election is secured by some of the strange mischances that are constantly befalling us in the looseness of our political system. The accident is almost invariably a sad misfit and he is usually an exhalation of putrid political conditions or the outcome of a factional quarrel—which, after all, amounts to the same thing. The very preposterousness of the fellow excites the risibilities and he is a great joke as he rattles around in his seat, to be regarded with a grin in his struggles against oblivion. He always takes himself seriously and struts about industriously filling his pockets at the public expense, all unconscious of his own vagaries and absurdities. But the gratification of our sense of the humorous is not worth the cost when it is considered that such things make of our government a sorry jest and leave a feeling of contempt after the laugh is past.

It is pleasanter, even if less interesting, to look upon the bright side of the general assembly, where the honest and capable men who compose the majority are wisely and faithfully performing their duties and laboring to overcome the efforts of their obtuse or wicked colleagues. Tact, courage and parliamentary skill are required by the guardians of the public welfare, together with much hard work and sleepless vigilance. The life of a member who earnestly strives to be faithful to his trust as a public servant is laborious and harassing. He is compelled to be in his seat six or eight hours a day, to give two to four hours to his committees and caucuses and as much more to his correspondents, besides sparing a few hours to lobbyists, persons interested in pending legislation and visiting constituents, and he must find time to inform himself concerning the measures under consideration. He is obliged to incur the bitter hostility of a body of powerful and unscrupulous men who are always on the watch for weak points in his armor, and it must be said that on his side he generally has but a partially aroused or, if fully aroused, but a partially informed public sentiment.

A member is, as a rule, bound to represent the views of those who elect him, but he soon learns that there are times when the voice of the people is not the voice of God and that often what is represented to him as the voice of the people is only a big noise made by a very few interested individuals. He discovers that his position enables him to procure better information and to form wiser opinions than his constituents can and if he is conscientious he will do that which he knows to be right, regardless of the effect upon his own future.

Voters will do justice to their representatives. In the long run and on the average, but the justice may be long-delayed or somewhat uneven; but the people will know eventually whether a legislator has been honest and unselfish, or has made it a rule to consider first the probable effect of his actions upon his political prospects or his personal fortune. A good man may be dropped after his first term and a bad one may be sent back once or twice; nevertheless, when the public has formed its final opinion the faithful representative will have none the best of it.

How to Make Snickerdoodles.

"Snickerdoodles" is the somewhat fantastic name of quickly made little cakes especially dear to the children's heart. A recipe for them, copied from an old scrapbook, says: "Stir together two cups of sugar and half a cup of butter. When creamy, add two well-beaten eggs, then one cup of milk with a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in it; and, lastly, add two and a half cups of flour, with two teaspoonfuls of cream tartar and a half spoonful of salt. Beat the batter thoroughly and bake in shallow pans, dusting the top of the cake with cinnamon and sugar. Bake fifteen minutes and when cool cut in squares. This recipe will make two pansful, which will then cut into twenty-four squares."

SHOULDERERS TO THE WHEEL

Instead of Bearing Down Give Every-thing a Generous Lift.

Instead of fault-finding, growling and grumbling; instead of arguments for some other plan, every citizen of the town in which he lives should give every worthy enterprise at least his good will and aid in every possible way. If this is not done he should expect his town to grow sleepy, his property depreciate in value, and a lethargy grow up most detrimental to the town and county in which one may live. If there are those who do not propose to financially help any proposed worthy enterprise, he can help it to some extent by keeping still rather than to growl and grumble. All towns are alike in this feature; all villages, towns and cities have their fault-finders, while at the same time they also have their enterprising people; men who go ahead and by taking advantage of everything that comes to hand or may be in prospect, are the mainstay and promoters of everything that aids the place in which they live. Many of this sort are quiet, earnest men, but they are the salt and savor of their place of abode, and do not even grumble when some great enterprise becomes a fixed thing and of great value to all people to have those who opposed such enterprises at their origin, take all the credit to themselves for the success that has been achieved. If we desire our town to grow; that its rural districts shall have all the advantages procurable in this wonderful age of advancement; each and every one interested—even remotely thought may be—let us one and all put our shoulders to the wheel and with a united effort compel success. Instead of growling and opposing, that is the way to do—Warsaw Times.

WRONGHURST ROASTS.

Adlai Bascom says he was prepared for almost any emergency except twins. They came Sunday night and are both fine girls.

A blacksmith not a thousand miles from here said he had no change when the preacher asked for his subscription the other day. After the preacher was gone the blacksmith explained that what he really meant was that he had only one shirt.

An old democrat in this neighborhood was induced to subscribe for a Plymouth paper said to be published in the interest of his party. Speaking of his experience he said: "At first I thought the editor was a rascal but now I guess he is only capable of being a fool." He borrows our paper now.

Bill Jenkins says his daughter Linnie is a born flirt and that she doesn't deserve the peaceful life of an old maid but ought to marry a lazy man and have to take in washing.

We were reading down at the store last night about an Indiana farmer who became a Dowieite and killed his hogs to cure himself of consumption. "That's nothing," said Abner Hoke, "I cured myself of insomnia by killing off our cats."

Zeke Leffler went hunting Monday and got two rabbits without a shot. He scared them both up at the same time and they ran toward each other, neither seeing the other until they came together with such force that one got a broken neck and the other a broken leg. Zeke says so.

Snow makes fine poetry, but somehow it's not quite so beautiful when it comes.

Ed Wachter's wife is the most persistent borrower we ever knew. We asked her Sunday if she was troubled much in her neighborhood with borrowing. She said innocently that she was, lately, for none of her neighbors seem to have what she wants any more.

We had scalloped oysters for supper Friday night and enjoyed them very much.

Joe Hanson gave $2.50 to the preacher who married him last month and he is as mad as a hornet because Will Aline went him fifty cents better the other day. He is going to play even at the donation party this winter.

BILL BOOSTER.

Jumped on a Ten penny Nail

The little daughter of Mr. J. N. Powell jumped on an inverted rake made of ten penny nails; and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied and five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoe as usual and with absolutely no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant of Yorkland, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. For sale by J. W. Hess, Druggist.

EXPLOSION

Twenty-Seven Dead and Many Injured in Boiler Explosion and Fire at Detroit Tuesday—Loss $180,000.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 27.—The boiler in the factory of the Penberthy Injector company, 7th and Abbott streets, exploded yesterday with such terrific force that it demolished the entire three-story brick building in which it was located. Inside the structure some fifty employees were at work. More than half of these were more or less seriously injured and at least 27 were killed.

When the awful crash came the floors and roof of the building bulged upward and then crashed down with their heavy loads of machinery and foundry apparatus. Walls, roof, and all dropped into a shapeless mass of debris. Windows in houses for a block around were broken by the concussion, and flying bricks filled the neighboring yards. A dense cloud of dust arose, and as it settled, and was succeeded by denser clouds of smoke and steam, agonized cries began to come from the heap of tangled wood, metal, and bricks. Those who were only partly buried frantically dug themselves out, and then as energetically turned to digging for their comrades who were buried deeper. Flames broke out almost immediately, and the horror of fire was added to the suffering of the imprisoned ones.

The property loss, according to Secretary George W. Childs, is about $180,000. The firm carried $70,000 fire and some boiler insurance, but how much of the latter Secretary Childs could not state.

Subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers have been started. Nothing is known as yet about the cause of the explosion. The boilers had been recently inspected, and the engineer was known as one of the most careful and capable men in the city. The firm have already taken temporary quarters and will resume business as soon as possible.

United States Action at Colon Commended by Diplomats.

Columbian Consul-General at London Discusses the Panama Situation—Germany Nosing About For Chance to Circumvent Monroe Doctrine at the Isthmus.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The action of the United States in preventing the bombardment of Colon is heartily approved by South American official opinion in London. Even Guillermo Calderon, Colombian consul-general to Great Britain, holds that Commander McCrea of the United States gunboat Machias acted wisely in restraining the impetuosity of the commander of the Colombian gunboat Gen. Pinzon. He said yesterday:

"The Colombian government is anxious to keep the good will of the United States and will not sanction any operation calculated to interfere with the freedom of transisthmian traffic. The insurgents cannot hurt us with the neutral zone protected by the arms of the United States. If they break the railway or commit depredations at Colon or Panama they must reckon with Uncle Sam."

Mr. Calderon hopes that hostilities in Columbia will be terminated shortly by the return from the pan-American congress of Gen. Rafael Reyes, second vice-president. He said on this point:

"Gen. Reyes will attempt to organize a government embracing the leading conservatives and liberals and therefore satisfactory to both parties to the present conflict. The liberals promise to stop the insurrection if this is done. They have the greatest confidence in Gen. Reyes as have also the conservatives and the great business men of Columbia who have stood aloof from politics. He is the most popular citizen of the country. When Gen. Reyes assumes the reins of power Jose Manuel Marroquin, the first vice-president, who now rules because of the advanced age of the president, will retire."

Mr. Calderon declares that Germany has a large fleet in Central American waters at present mainly to feel the pulse of Monroeism. "The kaiser," he said, "has no intention of forcibly opposing the Monroe doctrine, but if cautious experimenting should convince him of the possibility of the peaceful occupation of a bit of territory in Central or South America he would lose no time in securing a coaling station there, with thought more of the future than of the present. The Germans are chess players."

CLIMB PRECIPICE

Another Daring Deed of American Soldiers Who Capture Fort.

MANILA, Nov. 25.—Captain Edward P. Lawton's company of the Nineteenth infantry has attacked and captured an insurgent fort on Bohl island, south of Cebu, in the Visayan group. This fort was surrounded by a precipice and the only entrance to the higher ground was guarded by a stockade with a line of intrenchments behind it. Captain Lawton sent Sergeant McMahon and twenty men to climb the precipice and attack the fort in the rear. Sergeant McMahon's party accomplished their task after three hours climbing through the thick undergrowth of brush and vines that covered the almost perpendicular cliff. They took the enemy by surprise and drove them from the fort. As the insurgents escaped they had to pass the remainder of Captain Lawton's company at a distance of 150 yards. Here the enemy suffered terrible losses.

The insurgents defended themselves with both cannon and rifles. The cannon were captured. The smaller ones were removed while the larger ones were buried. Captain Lawton, in his report, makes special mention for bravery of Sergeants List and McMahon.

RIGHT UP TO DATE.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

These are days of records and of the beating of records. Benson's Plaster, for quickness of action and thoroughness of cure, has no records to beat except its own. Benson's Plaster, always the best, always the leader, is to-day better than ever. It sticks to the skin but never sticks in its tracks. It marches on. The people not only want to be cured but cured quickly—and Benson's Plaster does it. Cough, cold, influenza, bronchitis, liver and kidney complaints, and other ills approachable by an external remedy, yield to Benson's Plaster as ice does to heat. Neither Belladonna, Strengthening or Capsicum plasters are to be compared with Benson's. People who have once tested the merits of Benson's Plaster have no use for any other external remedy.

More than 5,000 physicians and druggists (and a thousand times as many non-professional persons) have called Benson's Plaster one of the few (1) home remedies that can be trusted.

Fifty-five highest awards have been made to it in competition with the best known plasters of Europe and America. Better proof of its merits is inconceivable. Be sure to get the genuine.
